SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION

Self-Regulatory Organizations; Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, Inc.; Order Approving a Proposed Rule Change Relating to Revisions to the Definitions of Non-Public Arbitrator and Public Arbitrator

February 26, 2015.

I. Introduction

The proposed rule change was published for comment in the Federal Register on July 3, 2014. On August 4, 2014, FINRA extended the time period in which the Commission must approve the proposed rule change, disapprove the proposed rule change, or institute proceedings to determine whether to approve or disapprove the proposed rule change to October 1, 2014. The Commission received three hundred sixteen (316) comment letters in response to the Notice of Filing. On September 30, 2014, the Commission received a letter from FINRA responding to the comment letters. On October 1, 2014, the Commission issued an order to institute proceedings pursuant to section 19(b)(2)(B) of the Act to determine whether to approve or disapprove the proposed rule change. The order was published for comment in the Federal Register on October 7, 2014. The Commission received fourteen (14) comment letters in response to the Proceedings Order.

II. Summary

The Commission discussed these comments in the Proceedings Order. See infra note 7.

III. Conclusion

March 9, 2015.

The Commission approved the proposed rule change.

Jill M. Peterson,
Assistant Secretary.
November 24, 2014, the Commission received a letter from FINRA responding to the comment letters.9 On December 11, 2014, the Commission received a letter from FINRA supplementing the FINRA November Letter.10

This order approves the proposed rule change.

II. Description of the Proposed Rule Change

In general, FINRA classifies arbitrators as “non-public” or “public” based on their professional and personal affiliations. Currently, FINRA Rule 12100(p) of the Customer Code and FINRA Rule 13100(p) of the Industry Code (defining the term “non-public arbitrator”) list financial industry affiliations that might qualify a person to serve as a non-public arbitrator in the FINRA arbitration forum. Conversely, FINRA Rule 12100(u) of the Customer Code and FINRA Rule 13100(u) of the Industry Code (defining the term “public arbitrator”) list affiliations that disqualify a person from serving as a public arbitrator in the FINRA arbitration forum. FINRA is proposing to delete the definitions in their entirety, and replace them with new definitions. The proposed amendments are described below.

A. Non-Public Arbitrator Definition

Under the current non-public arbitrator definition, if a person is currently, or was within the past five years, affiliated with a financial industry entity specified in the rule (a “specified financial industry entity”), the person is classified as a non-public arbitrator.12 The rule permits these individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators five years after ending all financial industry affiliations unless (i) they retired from, or spent a substantial part of their career with, a specified financial industry entity13 or (ii) they were affiliated for 20 years or more with a specified financial industry entity.14 The individuals subject to these exceptions remain classified as non-public arbitrators.

New Rule 12100[p][1] would eliminate the five-year cooling-off provision for persons who work in the financial industry by permanently classifying persons who are, or were, affiliated with a specified financial industry entity at any point in their careers, for any duration, as non-public arbitrators. New Rule 12100[p][1] would also add two new categories of financial industry professionals who would be permanently classified as non-public arbitrators: (i) Persons associated with, including registered through, a mutual fund or hedge fund, and (ii) persons associated with, including registered through, an investment adviser.15

In addition, new Rule 12100[p][1] would clarify certain references made in the current rule. For instance, the new rule would replace “[a person] registered under the Commodity Exchange Act; a member of a commodities exchange,”16 or associated with a person or firm registered under the Commodity Exchange Act,”17 with “a person who is, or was, associated with, including registered through, under, or with (as applicable), . . . the Commodity Exchange Act or the Commodities Futures Trading Commission[.]” Also, instead of referring to “a member . . . of a registered futures association,”18 new Rule 12100[p][1][B] would identify the association as the National Futures Association. Moreover, new Rule 12100[p][1][B] would include a reference to “[a person] who is, or was, associated with, including registered through, under, or with (as applicable), . . . the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board.” In addition, new Rule 12100[p][1][C] would include a provision to cover any entity “organized under or registered pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Investment Company Act of 1940, or the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.” This provision would cover financial industry affiliated persons not otherwise specified in the rule and potential categories of financial industry professionals that may be created in the future.

2. Proposed New Rule 12100[p][2]

Under current Rule 12100[p][3], attorneys, accountants, and other professionals who devoted 20 percent or more of their professional work in the last two years to serving specified financial industry entities and/or employees, are classified as non-public arbitrators.19 Rule 12100[p][3] permits these individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators two years after they stopped providing services to specified financial industry entities, with one exception. A person who provided services for 20 calendar years or more over the course of his or her career is permanently disqualified from serving as a public arbitrator.19

Proposed new Rule 12100[p][2] would broaden the application of current Rule 12100[p][3] in three ways: (i) It would increase the look-back period from two years to five years, (ii) it would apply to not only services provided to specified financial industry entities but also to services provided to any persons or entities associated with those specified financial industry entities, and (iii) it would permanently disqualify from serving as public arbitrators persons who provided the specified services for 15 Where this order refers only to rules in the Customer Code, the changes and discussions also apply to the corresponding rules in the Industry Code.

16 See current Rule 12100[p][1]. This provision applies to a person who is, or was within the past five years: (1) Associated with, including registered through, a broker or dealer (including a government securities broker or dealer or a municipal securities dealer); (2) registered under the Commodity Exchange Act; (3) a member of a commodities exchange or a registered futures association; or (4) associated with a person or firm registered under the Commodities Exchange Act.

17 See current Rule 12100[p][2].

18 Currently, FINRA Rules preclude these individuals from serving as arbitrators in any capacity. See current Rule 12100[p][1][B][D]. If, however, they end their affiliation they may serve as public arbitrators after a two-year cooling-off period. These individuals may serve as non-public arbitrators if they are qualified to serve under another provision (e.g., dually registered as an investment adviser and an associated person of a FINRA member).

19 See current Rule FINRA Rule 12100[p][1][B][D].
15 calendar years or more over the course of their careers (in contrast to the current 20 year provision).20 In addition, the proposal would replace the phrase “professional work” with “professional time.”

3. Proposed New Rule 12100(p)(3)

Currently, FINRA rules permit individuals who represent or provide professional services to investors in securities disputes to serve as public arbitrators.21 Under proposed new Rule 12100(p)(3), attorneys, accountants, and other professionals who devoted 20 percent or more of their professional time within the past five years, to serving parties in investment or financial industry employment disputes would be classified as non-public arbitrators. However, Rule 12100(p)(3) would permit these individuals to serve as public arbitrators five years after they stopped devoting 20 percent or more of their professional time to serving parties in investment or financial industry employment disputes with one exception. A person who provided services for 15 calendar years or more over the course of his or her career would be permanently disqualified from serving as a public arbitrator.22

4. Proposed New Rule 12100(p)(4)

Under current Rule 12100(p)(4), any person who is an employee of a bank or other financial institution who (i) effects transactions in securities, including government or municipal securities, commodities, futures, or options, or (ii) supervises or monitors the compliance with the securities and commodities laws of employees who engage in such activities would be classified as a non-public arbitrator. However, proposed new Rule 12100(p)(4) would permit these individuals to serve as public arbitrators five years after they ended their industry affiliation unless they provided these services for 15 years or more.24 After 15 years of service, the proposed rules would permanently classify such individuals as non-public arbitrators.25

B. Public Arbitrator Definition

1. Proposed New Rule 12100(u)(1)

Current Rules 12100(u)(1) and 12100(u)(3) identify the types of financial industry employment that disqualify a person from serving as a public arbitrator by cross-referencing those activities listed in current Rule 12100(p)( defining “non-public arbitrators”). Consequently, these otherwise qualified individuals are classified as non-public arbitrators. Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1) would retain the types of financial industry employment that would disqualify a person from serving as a public arbitrator with revisions identical to those in proposed new Rule 12100(p)(1). Specifically: (i) Instead of referring to “[a person] registered under the Commodity Exchange Act; a member of a commodities exchange . . . , or associated with a person or firm registered under the Commodity Exchange Act,” proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1)(B) would refer to “a person who is, or was, associated with, including registered through, under, or with (as applicable), . . . the Commodity Futures Trading Commission;” (ii) instead of referring to “a member . . . of a registered futures association,” proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1)(B) would identify the association as the National Futures Association; (iii) proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1)(B) would add a reference to “[a person] who is, or was, associated with, including registered through, under, or with (as applicable), . . . the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board;” and (iv) proposed new Rule 12100(p)(1)(C) would include a provision to cover any entity “organized under or registered pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Investment Company Act of 1940, or the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.” This provision would cover financial industry affiliated persons not otherwise specified in the rule and potential categories of financial industry professionals that may be created in the future.

As stated above, current FINRA Rule 12100(p)(1) generally permits individuals classified as non-public arbitrators to become reclassified as public arbitrators five years after ending their affiliations (subject to specified exceptions).26 As explained in the above discussion on proposed new Rule 12100(p)(1), the proposal would eliminate the five-year cooling-off period27 resulting in the permanent classification of these individuals as non-public arbitrators pursuant to new Rule 12100(u)(1).

2. Proposed New Rules 12100(u)(2) and 12100(u)(6)

Under current Rule 12100(u)(1), attorneys, accountants, and other professionals who devoted 20 percent or more of their professional work in the last two years to serving specified financial industry entities and/or employees listed in current Rule 12100(p)(1), may not be classified as public arbitrators. However, current Rule 12100(u)(1) permits these individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators two years after they stopped providing those services, with one exception.29 A person who provided services for 20 calendar years or more over the course of his or her career is permanently disqualified from serving as a public arbitrator.30

Proposed new Rules 12100(u)(2) and 12100(u)(6) would broaden the provisions of current Rule 12100(u)(1) in three ways: (i) It would apply to not only services provided to specified financial industry entities but also to services provided to any persons or 20 See supra notes 12, 12, and 13 and their accompanying text.

21 Current Rule 12100(u)(3) subjects investment advisers and persons associated with, including registered through, a mutual fund or hedge fund to a two-year cooling-off period after ending the affiliation. Under proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1), these individuals would also be subject to permanent classification as non-public arbitrators.

22 Although the descriptions of the disqualifications in proposed new Rules 12100(u)(2) and 12100(u)(6) are almost identical, FINRA believes it would add clarity to the definition to distinguish when the provisions would result in a permanent classification, and when they would result in a temporary classification. See Notice of Filing, 79 FR 38080, 38084 (Jul. 3, 2014).

23 Current Rule 12100(u)(3) incorporating, among other things, current Rule 12100(p)(3).
entities associated with those specified financial industry entities;\(^{31}\) (ii) new Rule 12100(u)(2) would decrease the number of years for a permanent disqualification from 20 years to 15 years;\(^{32}\) and (iii) new Rule 12100(u)(6) would increase the cooling-off period from two years to five years.\(^{33}\) In sum, the proposal would permanently disqualify from serving as public arbitrators persons who provided the specified services for 15 calendar years or more over the course of their careers.

3. Proposed New Rules 12100(u)(3) and 12100(u)(7)

Under proposed new Rules 12100(u)(3) and 12100(u)(7) attorneys, accountants, expert witnesses, and other professionals who devote 20 percent or more of their professional time annually to representing or providing services to parties in disputes concerning investment accounts or transactions, or employment relationships within the financial industry generally would be classified as non-public arbitrators.\(^{34}\) New Rule 12100(u)(7), however, would permit these individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators five years after the final calendar year in which they devoted 20 percent or more of their professional time providing those services with one exception. A person who provided services for 15 calendar years or more over the course of his or her career would be permanently disqualified from serving as a public arbitrator.\(^{35}\)

4. Proposed New Rules 12100(u)(4) and 12100(u)(8)\(^{36}\)

Under current Rule 12100(u)(1), any person who is an employee of a bank or other financial institution and (i) effects transactions in securities, including government or municipal securities, and commodities, futures, or options, or (ii) supervises or monitors the compliance with the securities and commodities laws of employees who engage in such activities is classified as a non-public arbitrator.\(^{37}\) When these individuals end their affiliation, they may immediately be reclassified as public arbitrators unless they have engaged in this type of work for 20 years or more over the course of their careers.\(^{38}\)

Proposed new Rules 12100(u)(4) and 12100(u)(8) would broaden the application of provisions of current Rule 12100(u)(1) in two ways: (i) Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(6) would permit these individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators five years after they ended their affiliation, and (ii) proposed new Rule 12100(u)(4) would decrease the number of years required for a permanent classification as a non-public arbitrator from 20 years to 15 years.\(^{39}\)

5. Proposed New Rule 12100(u)(5)

Under current Rules 12100(u)(6) and 12100(u)(7), individuals who are employed by,\(^{40}\) or who are directors or officers of,\(^{41}\) an entity that directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with, any partnership, corporation, or other organization that is engaged in the securities business are classified as non-public arbitrators.\(^{42}\) These persons may become public arbitrators two years after ending their affiliation.\(^{43}\)

Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(5) would broaden the provisions of current Rules 12100(u)(6) and 12100(u)(7) in two ways: (i) It would expand the scope of the classification by replacing the phrase “securities business” with “financial industry,” and (ii) it would increase the cooling-off period from two years to five years.\(^{44}\)

6. Proposed New Rule 12100(u)(9)

Under current Rule 12100(u)(4), an attorney, accountant, or other professional whose firm derived 10 percent or more of its annual revenue in the past two years from providing services to specified financial industry entities is classified as a non-public arbitrator. Similarly, under current Rule 12100(u)(5), any attorney, accountant, or other professional whose firm derived $50,000 or more in annual revenue in the past two years from providing professional services to any specified financial industry entity relating to any customer dispute concerning an investment account or transaction is also classified as a non-public arbitrator.

In both instances, however, current Rule 12100(u) permits such individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators two years after they ended their affiliation with the firm or two years after the firm no longer derived annual revenue from specified financial industry entities that exceeding those thresholds.\(^{45}\)

Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(9) would: (i) Merge current Rules 12100(u)(4) and 12100(u)(5), and (ii) remove the requirement that the $50,000 in revenue relate to customer disputes concerning an investment account or transaction. Specifically, under proposed new Rule 12100(u)(9) any person who is an attorney, accountant, or other professional whose firm derived $50,000 or more, or at least 10 percent of its annual revenue, in any single calendar year during the past two calendar years, from (i) the entities listed in proposed new Rule 12100(u)(1) and/or from any persons or entities associated with such listed entities, or (ii) a bank or other financial institution where persons effect transactions in securities including government or municipal securities, commodities, futures, or options would be classified as a non-public arbitrator. Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(9) would, however, permit such individuals to be reclassified as public arbitrators two calendar years after ending their employment with the employing firm.

7. Proposed New Rule 12100(u)(10)

Under proposed new Rule 12100(u)(10), attorneys, accountants, and other professionals whose firms derived $50,000 or more, or at least 10 percent of its annual revenue, in any single calendar year during the past two calendar years, from individual and/or institutional investors relating to securities matters generally would be classified as non-public arbitrators. Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(10) would, however, permit such individuals to be classified as non-public arbitrators.

\(^{31}\) Cf. current Rule 12100(p)(3) to illustrate the scope of coverage to be expanded by proposed new Rule 12100(u)(2).

\(^{32}\) The 15 years are a total number of years—they would not have to be consecutive years.

\(^{33}\) Substantively, proposed new Rules 12100(u)(2) and 12100(u)(6) are analogous to proposed new Rule 12100(p)(2).

\(^{34}\) The substance of proposed new Rules 12100(u)(3) and 12100(u)(7) corresponds to the substance of proposed new Rule 12100(p)(3).

\(^{35}\) See proposed new Rule 12100(u)(3). The 15 years are a total number of years—they would not have to be consecutive years.

\(^{36}\) Although the descriptions of the disqualifications in proposed new Rules 12100(u)(4) and 12100(u)(8) are almost identical, FINRA believes it would add clarity to the definition to distinguish when the provisions would result in a permanent classification, and when they would result in a temporary classification. See Notice of Filing, 79 FR 38080, 38084 (Jul. 3, 2014).

\(^{40}\) See current Rule 12100(u)(6).

\(^{41}\) See current Rule 12100(u)(7).

\(^{42}\) Under current Rules 12100(u)(6) and 12100(u)(7), a spouse or other immediate family member of such individuals would also be classified as a non-public arbitrator.

\(^{43}\) See current Rule 12100(u); see also infra note 49 and accompanying text.

\(^{44}\) Current Rule 12100(u) subjects individuals covered by current Rules 12100(u)(6) and 12100(u)(7) to a two-year cooling-off period after ending the affiliation. The disqualification for spouses and immediate family members is addressed in proposed new Rule 12100(u)(11), which retains a two-year cooling-off period after ending the affiliation or relationship (discussed below).

\(^{45}\) Current Rule 12100(u) subjects individuals covered by current Rules 12100(u)(4) and 12100(u)(5) to a two-year cooling-off period after ending the affiliation.
reclassified as public arbitrators two calendar years after ending their employment with the employing firm or two years after the firm no longer derived annual revenue from individual and/or institutional investors relating to securities matters that exceeding those thresholds.

Under current Rules 12100(u)(6) and 12100(u)(7), an individual whose spouse or immediate family member is employed by, or is a director or officer of, an entity that directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with, any partnership, corporation, or other organization that is engaged in the securities business is classified as a non-public arbitrator. These persons may become public arbitrators two years after ending their affiliation.48

In addition, under current Rule 12100(u)(6), an individual whose spouse or immediate family member is engaged in the conduct or activities described in current Rule 12100(p)(1)–(4) (i.e., is employed by a specified financial entity or provides services to such an entity and/or the entity’s employees) is classified as a non-public arbitrator.49

Proposed new Rule 12100(u)(11) would: (i) Merge current Rules 12100(u)(6), 12100(u)(7), and 12100(u)(8), and (ii) add a two year cooling-off period. Specifically, under new Rule 12100(u)(11) a person whose immediate family member is an individual whom FINRA would disqualify from serving on the public arbitrator roster would be classified as a non-public arbitrator. However, if the person’s immediate family member ends the disqualifying affiliation, or the person ends the relationship with the individual so that the individual is no longer the person’s immediate family member, the person would be able to be reclassified as a public arbitrator after two calendar years had passed from the end of the affiliation or relationship.

9. Definition of “Immediate Family Member”
Current Rule 12100(u) defines the term “immediate family member” to include a person’s parent, stepparent, child, stepchild, member of a person’s household, an individual to whom a person provides financial support of more than 50 percent of his or her annual income, or a person who is claimed as a dependent for federal income tax purposes. Current Rule 12100(u) does not define the term “spouse.”

Proposed new Rule 12100(u) would amend the definition of “immediate family member” to add as immediate family members a person’s spouse, partner in a civil union, and domestic partner.

The text of the proposed rule change is available, at the principal office of FINRA, on FINRA’s Web site at http://www.finra.org, and at the Commission’s Public Reference Room. A more detailed description of the proposed rule changes is contained in the Notice of Filing and the Proceedings Order.50

III. Comment Summary51
In response to the Notice of Filing, the Commission received 316 comment letters (including 295 copies of substantially the same letter submitted by self-identified independent financial advisors). Five of the commenters expressed support for the proposed rule change in its entirety.52 Two commenters opposed the proposed rule change in its entirety.53 The other commenters (including the independent financial advisors) generally supported the proposed rule change in part, but raised concerns about various aspects of the proposal.

In response to the Proceedings Order, the Commission received fourteen comments.54 Of these comments, four supported the proposal,55 three opposed the proposal,56 and the remainder partially supported or opposed aspects of the proposal.57

50 See supra notes 3 and 7.
51 Some provisions of the proposed rule change would result in a similar outcome—the permanent classification of certain individuals as non-public arbitrators. Accordingly, where the discussion of comments references specific provisions of the proposal, that discussion may also apply to other provisions in the proposal that would result in similar outcomes.
53 See SAC July Letter (stating that the proposed rule change should be disapproved until a cost-benefit analysis is provided) and Friedman July Letter (stating that FINRA should “go back to the drawing board”).
54 See supra note 8.
56 See Bender Letter, Friedman October Letter, and SAC October Letter.

A. Permanent Classification of Industry Employees as Non-Public Arbitrators
In general, the proposal would result in the permanent classification (or reclassification of current public arbitrators) of individuals who worked in the financial industry (a) in any capacity, (b) at any point, and (c) for any duration, (“Industry Affiliates”) as non-public arbitrators. Many commenters opposed the permanent classification of Industry Affiliates as non-public arbitrators for varying reasons.58

1. Elimination of the Cooling-Off Period
In general, the proposal would result in the classification (or reclassification of current public arbitrators) of individuals as non-public arbitrators who otherwise would have been classified as public arbitrators. Specifically, individuals who worked in the financial industry for any duration would be permanently classified as non-public arbitrators (effectively eliminating the five-year cooling-off period).59

Several commenters supported this provision as providing a workable “bright-line” test that would address criticism regarding bias (perceived or actual) in favor of the financial industry,60 including one that stated that eliminating the five-year cooling-off period would eliminate industry-side potential and perceived bias.61

Many commenters opposed eliminating the five-year cooling-off period for Industry Affiliates.62 Some of these commenters expressed concern that eliminating the cooling-off period could exclude arbitrators with industry experience who could be useful on a panel to, among other things, educate the other panelists on industry practice.63 Another commenter suggested that FINRA classify Industry Affiliates as neither public nor non-public arbitrators for a set number of years following the date they end their affiliation with the financial industry.64

This commenter also opposed categorizing any industry employee, regardless of capacity, as a non-public arbitrator. For example, this commenter suggested that industry employees who are clerical should be classified as neither public nor non-public arbitrators.65

In its response, FINRA disagreed with the opposing commenters, stating that its constituents agreed that any cooling off period for financial industry employees would “leave a perception of unfairness for some advocates.”66 In addition, FINRA stated that investor advocates have a stated preference for using expert witnesses and making their own arguments rather than relying on members of the arbitration panel that have industry experience to explain and influence matters.67 FINRA also stated, however, that former industry employees have valuable knowledge and experience, and that completely removing them from arbitrator service would negatively impact the forum.68 Similarly, FINRA stated that if an Industry Affiliate meets FINRA’s qualifications for service as an arbitrator (regardless of the capacity in which she or he served the financial industry), she or he should be classified as a non-public arbitrator.69 FINRA stated that parties to an arbitration would continue to have the authority to strike any or all arbitrators on the non-public list.70

Ultimately, FINRA stated that it believes that it is more workable to use a bright-line test than a pro rata cooling-off period for financial industry employees.71 Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.72

2. All Employees, Regardless of Capacity, To Be Classified as Non-Public Arbitrators

Four commenters stated that, as proposed, the rule would improperly characterize certain individuals without true financial industry experience as non-public arbitrators.73 One of these commenters expressed concern that individuals performing solely clerical or ministerial functions for a financial industry firm would be classified as non-public arbitrators because they would be considered “associated persons” as defined by Rule 12100(p).74 Accordingly, this commenter suggested FINRA amend the definition of the term “associated person” in the proposal to track the definition of the term “associated person” in section 3(a)(18) of the Act, which excludes individuals performing solely clerical or ministerial functions. Another commenter suggested that the proposal should only classify individuals who “worked for [a financial industry firm] in a capacity for which testing and registration is required” as non-public arbitrators to address this concern.75

In its response, FINRA stated that its staff believes that “investor concerns about the neutrality of the public roster apply to all industry employees, including those who serve in clerical or ministerial positions.”76 In addition, FINRA stated that it believes that if a financial industry affiliate meets FINRA’s qualifications for service as an arbitrator, FINRA should appoint the person to the non-public arbitrator roster.77 Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.78

B. Classification of Professionals

1. Classifying Investor Advocates as Non-Public Arbitrators

In general, the proposed rule change would classify attorneys, accountants, expert witnesses, or other professionals who (a) devote 20 percent or more of their professional time (b) in any single calendar year within the past five calendar years (c) to representing or providing services to parties in disputes concerning investment accounts or transactions, or employment relationships within the industry (“Investor Advocates”) as non-public arbitrators.79 Currently, individuals meeting this description are classified as public arbitrators. Several commenters supported this provision,80 including two commenters that indicated that this provision is necessary to eliminate potential and perceived investor-side bias.81 Specifically, one of these commenters stated that the rationale for eliminating perceived bias is the same for both public and non-public arbitrators.82 Another commenter stated that eliminating perceived investor-side bias is necessary in light of the implementation of the all-public-panel rule.83 Similarly, one commenter noted that the historical distinction of classifying arbitrators as public arbitrators based on their financial industry experience was compelling when FINRA required the presence of someone with financial industry experience on all panels, but is no longer necessary with the advent of the all-public-panel rule.84

Several commenters also opposed the classification of Investor Advocates as non-public arbitrators,85 including some commenters who supported the classification of industry-affiliated persons as non-public arbitrators.86 Many of these commenters stated that including investor representatives in the public arbitrator pool counteracts some of the existing perceived bias in favor of the financial industry in the FINRA arbitration forum.87 One commenter stated that “[h]e could not fathom how this [provision] would further investor protection.”88 Two other commenters stated that there is no evidence supporting the assumption that professionals who serve the investing public have any bias either for or against the financial industry.89 Another commenter stated that it believes that the classification of Investor Advocates as non-public arbitrators is inconsistent with the concept of a “public” arbitrator.90 Two commenters argued that there is a perception that the arbitration system is unfair or always “stacked against” investors and that “any proposal to change the definitions of public and non-public arbitrator should be focused on mitigating the investing public’s perception of bias, not the industry’s perception of bias.”91 Another commenter asserted that the “public” and “non-public” labels were never intended to account for biases in favor of the investing public but rather to eliminate arbitrators’ perceived and actual bias against customers who are compelled to participate in the forum by the financial industry.92 This commenter also argued that the proposed new classifications would cause confusion because Investor Advocates generally represent the public and would naturally be considered to be associated with the “public” pool.93

In the Notice of Filing, FINRA stated that it proposed the reclassification of arbitrator categories in response to concerns regarding the neutrality of the public arbitrator roster raised by both investor representatives and industry representatives.94 Similarly, in its response FINRA stated that addressing both investor and industry perceptions of bias in the public arbitrator roster would better safeguard the integrity of its arbitration forum.95 FINRA also stated that parties would continue to receive extensive disclosure statements on each proposed arbitrator that describe in detail that arbitrator’s background. Accordingly, FINRA believes that under the proposal parties in customer cases would be able to address their own perceptions of bias that may arise under the proposal through the use of their unlimited strikes on the list of non-public arbitrators.96 Thus, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.97

2. Five-Year Cooling-Off Period for Professionals Representing Industry

In general, the proposed rule change would extend the cooling-off period from two years to five years for attorneys, accountants, expert witnesses, or other professionals who (a) devote 20 percent or more of their professional time (b) in any single calendar year within the past five calendar years (c) to representing or providing services to financial industry firms (“Industry Advocates”). Three commenters generally supported this provision as fair and acknowledged the consistency of approach towards professionals representing investors and those representing industry.98 Another commenter generally supported removing Industry Advocates from the public arbitrator roster, but believed that they should be permanently classified as non-public arbitrators like financial industry employees (i.e., the commenter suggested that FINRA eliminate the cooling-off period rather than extend it).99

In its response, FINRA stated that it has drawn a distinction between individuals who work in the financial industry and individuals who provide services to the financial industry. FINRA also stated its belief that to help ensure fairness to all forum users, it needed to take a consistent approach to cooling-off periods for service providers to both investors and the financial industry.100 Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.101

3. Using Professional Time To Quantify Professional Work

As stated above, the proposal would classify attorneys, accountants, expert witnesses, or other professionals as

4. Impact to the Pool of Public Arbitrators

a. Number of Available Public Arbitrators

Since February 1, 2011, customers have been able to choose an arbitration panel composed entirely of public arbitrators (i.e., an “all-public panel”).11 One commenter cited statistics that indicated that customers in approximately three-quarters of eligible cases choose an all-public panel.112 Another commenter estimated that public arbitrators account for approximately 85% of those that serve.113 Consequently, several commenters expressed concern that the proposed rule change would negatively impact the number of public arbitrators available to serve in FINRA’s arbitration forum.114 Similarly, some commenters suggested that under the proposed rule change FINRA would need to devote resources to recruit additional public arbitrators.115

Several commenters questioned FINRA’s estimate that the total number of arbitrators that would be reclassified from public arbitrators to non-public arbitrators would be approximately 474 out of 3,567 current public arbitrators (approximately 13.3%).117 A number of commenters stated that they believe that FINRA severely underestimated the number of arbitrators that would be reclassified.118 Some commenters estimated that the number of public arbitrators that would be reclassified is approximately one-fourth or 25% of the current public arbitrator pool.119 Consequently, commenters expressed concern that the proposal would result in delays in arbitration proceedings due to an insufficient number of arbitrators.120 Two commenters cited the recent stay in arbitration proceedings in Puerto Rico as an example of the possible outcome if the pool of public arbitrators is drastically reduced in some geographic areas.121 In its response, FINRA acknowledged commenters’ concerns about reducing the number of public arbitrators currently on the public arbitrator roster. FINRA also stated, however, that it believes that addressing users’ perceptions of the neutrality of its public arbitrators outweighs those concerns.122 In addition, FINRA stated that it intends to address commenters’ concerns as well, stating its commitment to aggressively recruiting arbitrators to help ensure that “the forum has a sufficient number of public arbitrators to serve the needs of forum users in each of its hearing locations.”123 Specifically, FINRA illustrated its ongoing efforts to recruit public arbitrators since the adoption of the all-public panel rule.124 In addition, FINRA expressed its commitment to arbitrator retention, citing its recent rule proposal to increase the amount of honoraria arbitrators receive in connection with serving on a panel.125 In its response, FINRA concluded that despite the increase in the number of public arbitrators resulting from the proposed rule change, the FINRA forum will have a sufficient number of public arbitrators to serve the immediate needs of forum users.126 In addition, FINRA stated that if the proposal was approved it would focus its recruiting efforts on the hearing locations most impacted by the rule change and that it would assign additional staff to recruitment as necessary.127 Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.128

b. Quality of Public Arbitrator Pool

Several commenters expressed concern that the proposed rule change would negatively impact the quality of public arbitrators available to serve in FINRA’s arbitration forum.129 In particular, these commenters were concerned that the classification of Investor Advocates as non-public arbitrators would diminish the number of qualified public arbitrators.130 For example, one commenter stated that the proposal would result in the most highly trained public arbitrators for customer-member cases being reclassified as non-public arbitrators.131 Another commenter stated more generally that the proposal would “gut the public arbitrator pool of many experienced and knowledgeable arbitrators” and result in a “brain drain” of the public arbitrator pool.132

In its response, FINRA stated that the proposed rule change would not reduce the total number of arbitrators available for selection but rather would shift them to another part of the roster. Accordingly, FINRA stated that it does not believe that the proposed rule change would drain from the forum the experience and expertise of those arbitrators being reclassified as non-public. FINRA stated that instead, the parties would receive a complete description of the background and experience of each arbitrator on the non-public list and could use that information to rank or strike them accordingly. FINRA stated that the proposal would effectively maintain the reclassified individuals in the pool of arbitrators as non-public arbitrators to be able to continue to utilize their experience and expertise while eliminating the industry’s perception of bias of these arbitrators. In addition, FINRA acknowledged the need for aggressive arbitrator recruitment to help ensure that the forum has a sufficient number of qualified public arbitrators and outlined the measures it intends to undertake to fulfill this objective. Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.

5. Impact on Qualified Chairpersons

Several commenters expressed concern that the proposed rule change would negatively impact the quantity and quality of chairpersons available to serve in FINRA’s arbitration forum. Some commenters suggested changes to the qualification requirements for chairpersons in customer cases, such as allowing arbitrators with investor relationships to serve as chairpersons or requiring that the chairperson be a judge or hold a law degree. In its response, FINRA stated that allowing arbitrators with investor relationships to serve as chairpersons would nullify the effort to address perceived bias. FINRA also noted that more than 75 percent of the public chair-qualified arbitrators are attorneys and therefore stated that it does not believe that changes to the chair qualifications are necessary. Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.

6. Cost-Benefit Analysis

a. Timing

Several commenters stated that the proposed rule change should not be approved until FINRA obtained additional data and published a detailed cost-benefit analysis justifying the proposal. In particular, these commenters expressed concern with FINRA’s commitment to perform a detailed cost-benefit analysis after the proposal was implemented in order to assess its impact and determine where to allocate additional resources for arbitrator recruitment. Two of these commenters stated that if FINRA ultimately finds the impact of the proposed rule change unsupported, forum participants would have to comply with a “bad” rule while proceedings are pending to approve a subsequent rule change. One of these commenters also stated that if the effort to conduct a cost-benefit analysis is to be expended in any event, conducting it prior to implementing the proposal could streamline implementation of the proposed rule change.

In its response, FINRA stated that a cost-benefit analysis, while useful for planning purposes, does not outweigh the imperative of addressing the users’ perception of neutrality in maintaining the integrity of the forum, and that FINRA requires FINRA to address the concerns of all forum users. Further, FINRA noted that the “proposed rule change is the culmination of extensive dialogue with FINRA constituents and FINRA filed the proposed rule change at the urging of its constituents.” In addition, FINRA stated that performing a cost-benefit analysis would be time-intensive and require a survey of every public arbitrator on its roster. In the interim, FINRA performed a preliminary analysis of databases currently available to it to obtain estimates of the potential impact of the proposed rule change.

b. Potential Forum Delays

Three commenters stated that by failing to conduct an in-depth analysis of the impact of the proposed rule change, FINRA failed to weigh the consequences of its actions. For example, one commenter suggested that FINRA may not currently have enough public arbitrators and that this shortage of public arbitrators may be contributing to an increase in overall case turnaround time. Similarly, two commenters identified the lack of a cost-benefit analysis as a reason that FINRA has underestimated the potential impact of the proposal on the public arbitrator pool.

Alternatively, one commenter stated that FINRA’s representations that the proposal would not affect a significant number of arbitrators are sufficient. This commenter also stated that even if the impact to the public arbitrator pool is greater than anticipated, it is a small price to pay for arbitrator neutrality. In its response, FINRA stated that it monitors the amount of time it takes to process a claim in its forum and has not heard from forum users that arbitrator availability is causing delays in processing cases. Instead, FINRA stated that various other factors are more likely to result in delays, including party-initiated postponements; an increase in the number of hearing sessions per case; concentration of law firms representing the majority of parties; and efforts to verify arbitrators’ disclosures to protect parties from undisclosed arbitrator conflicts. Moreover, as discussed above, FINRA stated that it recognizes the need for aggressive arbitrator recruitment to address any potential impact and outlined the steps it expects to take in its aggressive recruitment and retention of public arbitrators.

7. Consideration of the Proposal by FINRA’s Dispute Resolution Task Force

Two commenters suggested that FINRA withdraw the proposal and submit it to its recently formed Arbitration Task Force for consideration.
consideration.\textsuperscript{160} One of these commenters suggested that the Task Force should be permitted to consider the proposal after a full impact analysis is conducted so that the Task Force would have the benefit of this analysis for its consideration.\textsuperscript{161}

In its response, FINRA stated that it has engaged in a comprehensive process soliciting input from interested groups.\textsuperscript{162} It also stated that the proposal reflects a balanced approach on classifying arbitrators that would enhance forum users’ perception of fairness of the forum.\textsuperscript{163} In addition, FINRA stated that while the Task Force is setting its own agenda and is free to discuss the arbitrator definitions, it does not expect to make any recommendations until the fall of 2015, which would make it unlikely for FINRA to file any proposed rule change based on Task Force recommendations until at least 2016.\textsuperscript{164} FINRA indicated that it does not believe that it would be in the best interests of forum users to delay action on this fully considered proposal.\textsuperscript{165}

8. Alternative Solutions

Several commenters suggested alternatives to the proposal.\textsuperscript{166} For example, two commenters suggested that FINRA require arbitrators to disclose additional information about themselves, including their mix of work and the percentage of revenue derived from representation for or against the financial industry, so that parties can make independent determinations about each arbitrator.\textsuperscript{167} One of these commenters also suggested that FINRA eliminate the labels of public and non-public altogether and allow parties to choose from a single pool of arbitrators.\textsuperscript{168} Another commenter stated that Industry Affiliates should not permanently remain classified as non-public arbitrators but rather should be reclassified as being precluded from acting as an arbitrator in any capacity (i.e., a “no-man’s-land”) for a number of years after ceasing their respective affiliation with the financial industry.\textsuperscript{169}

Three other commenters objected to broker-dealers’ use of pre-dispute mandatory arbitration agreements.\textsuperscript{170} Other commenters suggested ways to improve the quality of arbitration panels.\textsuperscript{171}

As discussed above, FINRA stated that it has engaged in a robust review process, including consultation with its NAMC, interested groups, and other forum constituents, during which it encouraged interested persons to raise their concerns about the definitions and to make suggestions on how to improve them.\textsuperscript{172} FINRA stated that its NAMC did not recommend that FINRA eliminate the arbitrator classifications.\textsuperscript{173} In addition, FINRA stated that eliminating the arbitrator classifications would undermine many of its recent changes to arbitrator selection rules, notably its all-public panel rule, which have been positively received by parties. In addition, FINRA stated that the recommended alternatives were either outside the scope of, or would cause undue delay to, the proposed rule change.\textsuperscript{174} Accordingly, FINRA declined to amend the proposed rule change.\textsuperscript{175}

IV. Discussion

The Commission has carefully considered the proposed rule change, the comments received, and FINRA’s responses to the comments. Based on its review of the record, the Commission finds that the proposal is consistent with the requirements of the Act and the rules and regulations thereunder applicable to a national securities association.\textsuperscript{176} In particular, the Commission finds that the proposal is consistent with section 15A(b)(6) of the Act, which requires, among other things, that FINRA’s rules be designed to prevent fraudulent and manipulative acts and practices, to promote just and equitable principles of trade, and, in general, to protect investors and the public interest.\textsuperscript{177}

As stated above, FINRA classifies arbitrators as “non-public” or “public” based on their professional and personal affiliations.

The proposal would, among other things: (1) Permanently classify as “non-public arbitrators” individuals with certain affiliations with the financial industry; and (2) classify as non-public arbitrators certain professionals (e.g., accountants and attorneys) who represent or provide services to parties in disputes concerning investment accounts or transactions, or employment relationships within the financial industry.\textsuperscript{178} Consequently, the proposed rule change would, in some instances, require the reclassification of current public arbitrators to non-public arbitrators.

As stated in the Notice of Filing, the proposed rule change was designed to address concerns regarding the perceived neutrality of the public arbitrator roster raised by both investor representatives and financial industry representatives.\textsuperscript{179} Specifically, the classification of individuals affiliated with the financial industry as non-public arbitrators responds to concerns of potential bias of arbitrators, whether actual or perceived, in favor of the industry.\textsuperscript{180} Similarly, the classification of Investor Advocates as non-public arbitrators responds to concerns of potential bias of arbitrators, whether actual or perceived, in favor of investors.\textsuperscript{181}

The Commission believes that the proposed rule change would help to address any perceived bias of public arbitrators by classifying certain individuals with either financial industry experience or significant experience representing investors as non-public arbitrators. Accordingly, the Commission also believes that the proposal would enhance the perception of neutrality of the entire FINRA arbitration forum. The Commission recognizes commenters’ concerns that classifying Investor Advocates as non-public investors may be inconsistent with their historic view of non-public and public arbitrators (i.e., classifying public arbitrators and non-public arbitrators based on their affiliations (or lack thereof) with the financial industry). The Commission also recognizes, however, that the public interest would be served by addressing concerns of fairness and neutrality for all forum users.183

The Commission also recognizes the concerns of some commenters that the proposed rule change would require FINRA to reclassify some current public arbitrators as non-public arbitrators and that these reclassifications may temporarily reduce the number and quality of the public arbitrator pool, particularly in light of the implementation of FINRA’s all-public-panel rules.184 The Commission, however, also recognizes FINRA’s current and proposed future efforts to help ensure the sufficiency of the public arbitrator pool.185

Although FINRA stated that it currently anticipates having a sufficient number of public arbitrators to serve the immediate needs of forum users, it also acknowledged that the proposal may necessitate aggressive arbitrator recruitment.186 Accordingly, FINRA stated that it is committed to help ensure that the forum has a sufficient number of public arbitrators to serve the needs of its forum members in each of its hearing locations.187 For example, FINRA stated that it intends to conduct a detailed survey of its public arbitrators as part of an impact analysis to assist in allocating its resources to recruit public arbitrators in the areas most needed.188 In addition, FINRA stated that it intends to devote its resources to recruiting arbitrators.189

Furthermore, FINRA stated that it has taken steps to enhance arbitrator retention. For example, FINRA stated that it has implemented a new rule to increase the amount of honoraria paid to its arbitrators.190 In addition, FINRA stated that it intends to increase the amount of honoraria paid to arbitrators when a party or parties postpone or cancel hearing sessions on short notice.191

While FINRA acknowledges that the proposed rule change will necessitate aggressive arbitrator recruitment to help ensure that its arbitration forum will continue to have sufficient public arbitrators to prevent delays in all hearing locations, the Commission preliminarily believes that FINRA’s plan to mitigate such delays is appropriate, particularly in light of the primary objective of the proposal—improving the perceived neutrality of its arbitrators and integrity of its arbitration forum.

In sum, the Commission believes that the proposed rule change would help address forum users’ perceptions of neutrality in, and maintain the integrity of, the arbitration forum. In addition, the Commission believes the potential negative effects (in particular, a temporary decline in the number of available public arbitrators) will be mitigated by FINRA’s proposed recruitment and retention of public arbitrators.

The proposed rule change would also: (1) Extend the cooling off period for Industry Affiliates and Investor Advocates to five years, and (2) use professional time to quantify professional work when determining whether a person qualifies as an Industry Affiliate or Investor Advocate. Although some commenters suggested alternatives, such as proportional cooling off periods or using revenue, instead of professional time, to quantify professional work, FINRA stated its belief that a bright-line test is more workable and eases administrative burdens while addressing concerns about potential or perceived bias in the forum.

In addition to the amendments discussed above, the proposed rule change would make several additional changes to the Codes. For instance, the proposal would (1) add new categories of financial industry personnel who would be classified as non-public arbitrators, in particular persons associated with, including registered through, a mutual fund or hedge fund and persons associated with, including registered through, an investment adviser; (2) reduce from 20 to 15, the number of years a person must work over the course of his or her career in specified capacities in order to be permanently classified as a non-public arbitrator; and (3) redefine the definition of “immediate family member” as well as add a two year cooling off period for individuals whose immediate family members engage in specified activities that disqualify them from serving on the public arbitrator roster.

The Commission also recognizes some of the other concerns raised by commenters regarding the process FINRA used for proposing this rule. Some commenters expressed concern that FINRA did not perform a cost-benefit analysis prior to proposing the rule change. Other commenters recommended that FINRA submit the proposal to its Arbitration Task Force prior to proposing it. In response, FINRA identified the process it took in developing and considering the proposal, including consultation with its NAMC, interested groups, and other forum users; stated that additional consideration by the Arbitration Task Force is not precluded; and stated its intent to perform future cost-benefit analysis to prevent burdening its arbitrators prior to the effectiveness of the proposed new rule. In sum, the Commission believes that FINRA gave due consideration to the proposal and met the requirements of the Exchange Act. However, the Commission will be interested in the results of FINRA’s future cost-benefit analysis and the staff will monitor the consequences of approval of the proposed rule change.

For the reasons stated above, the Commission finds that the proposed rule change is consistent with the Act and the rules and regulations thereunder.
SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION

Self-Regulatory Organizations; Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board; Notice of Filing of Amendment No. 1 and Amendment No. 2 and Order Granting Accelerated Approval of a Proposed Rule Change Consisting of Proposed Amendments to MSRB Rules G–1, on Separately Identifiable Department or Division of a Bank; G–2, on Standards of Professional Qualification; G–3, on Professional Qualification Requirements; and D–13, on Municipal Advisory Activities

February 26, 2015.

I. Introduction

On November 18, 2014, the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board (the “MSRB” or “Board”) filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC” or “Commission”), pursuant to Section 19(b)(1) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (“Act”) 1 and Rule 19b–4 thereunder, 2 a proposed rule change. On February 5, 2015, the MSRB submitted a response to the comments on Amendment No. 1. On February 25, 2015, the MSRB submitted Amendment No. 2 (“Amendment No. 2” and together with Amendment No. 1, the “Amendments”). The Commission is publishing this notice to solicit comments on the Amendments from interested persons and is approving the proposed rule change, as modified by the Amendments, on an accelerated basis.

II. Description of the Proposed Rule Change

According to the MSRB, the purpose of the proposed rule change is to establish professional qualification requirements for municipal advisors and their associated persons and to make related changes to select MSRB rules. A full description of the proposed rule change is contained in the Proposing Release.

III. Proposed Amendments to Rule G–1

The proposed amendments to Rule G–1 includes language to provide that, for purposes of its municipal advisory activities, the term “separately identifiable department or division of a bank” would have the same meaning as used in 17 CFR 240.15Ba1–1(d)(4).

IV. Proposed Amendments to Rule G–2

The proposed amendments to Rule G–2 add a basic requirement that no municipal advisor shall engage in municipal advisory activities unless such municipal advisor and every natural person associated with such municipal advisor is qualified in accordance with the rules of the Board.

V. Proposed Amendments to Rule G–3

Apprenticeship

MSRB Rule G–3 currently requires a municipal securities representative to serve an apprenticeship period of 90 days before transacting business with any member of the public or receiving compensation for such activities. The MSRB believes that dealers and municipal advisors should determine the length and nature of the initial training for newly registered persons, consistent with industry feedback and the approach taken by Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (“FINRA”). Accordingly, the proposed amendments to Rule G–3 eliminate the apprenticeship requirement for municipal securities representatives and, similarly, do not propose an apprenticeship requirement for municipal advisor representatives.

New Registration Classifications

The proposed amendments to Rule G–3 create two new registration classifications: (i) Municipal advisor representative; and (ii) municipal advisor principal.

The proposed amendments to Rule G–3 define a “municipal advisor representative” as a natural person associated with a municipal advisor who engages in municipal advisory activities on the municipal advisor’s behalf, other than a person performing only clerical, administrative, support or similar functions. The proposed amendments to Rule G–3 require each municipal advisor representative to take and pass the Municipal Advisor...
