

survey) is designed to collect information on such other authentication methods.

Another comment addressed concerns about the collection of information on the “tokenization” of payments from card networks. Such solutions can be implemented in various ways by parties to the transaction. It would be difficult to comprehensively measure the variety of tokenization schemes being used. The Federal Reserve believes it is important to collect information from survey respondents that is feasible, even when the universe of competing methods cannot be measured in the survey. Given that the surveys sometimes collect partial information, it is important to recognize any limitations on new and emerging trends, especially at the analysis and reporting stages.

A comment suggested collecting “counterfeit” fraud for remote payments. The survey collects counterfeit card fraud, which, according to card network definitions, means that a fake version of the card is created and used at a merchant’s point-of-sale card terminal, an in-person situation. Remote payment fraud is classified by the card networks as an “unauthorized use of account number.” The Federal Reserve believes this definition will capture the type of fraud requested in the comment.

A comment requested some detail on mobile wallet provisioning. As mobile wallet questions are new for this survey, the Federal Reserve will not expand mobile wallet questions until a baseline can be established.

Private-Label Cards

One comment requested the addition of questions on the number of cards in force with multi-factor authentication mechanisms. The revised survey includes a question on the use of chips for private-label cards for the first time. Additional questions may be considered once a baseline is established.

EBT

A comment suggested collecting additional detail on authentication methods used for EBT payments. The Federal Reserve believes that EBT payments are almost exclusively PIN authenticated. Past survey efforts have not been successful in obtaining much detail underlying EBT payments, and the survey detail already requested may be difficult to obtain. No additional questions concerning authentication methods will be added at this time. If the situation improves, the Federal Reserve will seek to collect additional relevant detail in the future.

Mobile Wallet

A comment requested clarity with respect to the definition of a remote mobile transaction. Across all surveys, a remote payment is one in which the payment transaction is performed remotely, regardless of where or how the good or service is obtained. In an example with a remote card preauthorization, but with a payment made in person, the survey definition is that the payment is an in-person payment.

A comment suggested breaking out fraudulent mobile wallet transactions into person-present and remote categories. This requested breakout was added to the final proposed survey.

A comment suggested tracking the number of fraudulently provisioned cards to mobile wallets. The Federal Reserve does not know how such a question should fit into the present survey framework at this time, but believes that information on the number of fraudulent mobile wallet transactions may serve as a useful alternative measure.
