preordain a preservation outcome for affected historic properties, federal and local officials should consider creative mitigation measures that promote historic preservation goals even though they do not minimize harm to the impacted historic resource. For example, a neighborhood stabilization project may call for selective demolition of contributing structures within a historic district. To offset the loss, the project planners might commit funds for the renovation of other buildings within the district or fund a historic resources survey of a nearby neighborhood as the basis for future preservation planning. The activities proposed in creative mitigation measures should leverage the federal assistance to allow for broader public benefits. Discussions about creative mitigation should be initiated early in the Section 106 review process when options can be objectively evaluated and include consulting parties, representatives of the affected areas, as well as local officials, to ensure all views are considered. A desirable goal of creative mitigation measures is to advance community-wide preservation. They might include the development of local historic preservation ordinances, acquisition and relocation of historic properties to alternate sites in a historic district, or funding for landscaping and streetscape improvements in a district.

Federal, state, and local officials, applicants, and residents are encouraged to use these principles as plans are developed and Section 106 reviews coordinated. Please visit the ACHP's Web site, achp.gov, to view helpful case studies and best management practices that can further expand your knowledge of historic preservation tools, and how they are being used to revitalize and stabilize communities throughout the Nation.
