including all previously published conditions on TUVRNA's scope of recognition, in all areas for which it has recognition.

Pursuant to the authority in 29 CFR 1910.7, OSHA hereby expands the scope of recognition of TUVRNA, subject to the limitation and conditions specified above. Additionally, pursuant to the authority in 29 CFR 1910.7, OSHA further reduces the scope of recognition of TUVRNA per its request of voluntary withdrawal by removing the standard outlined in Table 2 above. TUVRNA has notified the NRTL clients for which TUVRNA certified products conforming to UL 913 of this reduction in NRTL scope.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:
The National Science Foundation, as directed by the Antarctic Conservation Act of 1978 (Pub. L. 95–541), has developed regulations for the establishment of a permit system for various activities in Antarctica and designation of certain areas as requiring special protection. The regulations establish such a permit system to designate Antarctic Specially Protected Areas.

The Foundation issued a permit (ACA 2016–020) to Laura K.O. Smith, Owner/Operator Quixote Expeditions, on December 23, 2015. The issued permit allows the permit holder to conduct waste management activities associated with the operation of the “Ocean Tramp,” a reinforced ketch-rigged sailing yacht in the Antarctic Peninsula region. Activities to be conducted by Quixote include: Passenger landings, hiking, photography, wildlife viewing, and possible station visits.

Now the permit holder proposes a change to the permit, and it will have a less than a minor or transitory impact. The amendment was not a material modification request and determined that the amendment was not a material modification to the permit, and it will have a less than a minor or transitory impact.
