of patient input and experience in the development of new outcome measures that are capable of measuring clinically meaningful effects in patients, and encouraging the incorporation of exploratory biomarkers in ALS development programs. Language was also added to provide greater context on the use of historical control data in ALS clinical trials, to suggest approaches to minimize patient burden during clinical trials, and to clarify safety data expectations for new ALS treatments. Finally, additions emphasize FDA's willingness to exercise flexibility in applying the statutory standards for approval of drugs for the treatment of serious diseases with unmet medical needs, while preserving appropriate assurances for safety and effectiveness.

This guidance is being issued consistent with FDA's good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The guidance represents the current thinking of FDA on ''Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis: Developing Drugs for Treatment.'' It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations. This guidance is not subject to Executive Order 12866.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

On October 11 and 12, 2017, the PEAC met to discuss and make recommendations regarding patient engagement into medical device clinical investigations. The PEAC stated that some framework should be developed by FDA and industry to clarify how patient advisors can engage in the clinical investigation process. Based on this recommendation, FDA is pursuing various efforts of patient engagement in clinical trials, including guidance. FDA believes medical device clinical investigations designed with patient input may help to address common challenges faced in medical device clinical investigations.

While FDA acknowledges that patient engagement may be beneficial across the total product lifecycle, this draft guidance focuses on the applications of patient engagement in the design and conduct of medical device clinical investigations.

II. Significance of Guidance

This draft guidance is being issued consistent with FDA's good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The draft guidance, when finalized, will represent the current thinking of FDA on ''Patient Engagement in the Design and Conduct of Clinical Investigations.'' It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations. This guidance is not subject to Executive Order 12866.

III. Electronic Access

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the draft guidance may do so by downloading an electronic copy from the internet. A search capability for all Center for Devices and Radiological Health guidance documents is available at https://www.fda.gov/medical-devices/device-advice-comprehensive-regulatory-assistance/guidance-documents-medical-devices-and-radiation-emitting-products. This guidance document is also available at https://www.regulations.gov or https://www.fda.gov/vaccines-blood-biologics/guidance-compliance-regulatory-information-biologics/biologics-guidances. Persons unable to download an electronic copy of ''Patient Engagement in the Design and Conduct of Clinical Investigations'' may send an email request to CDRH-Guidance@fda.hhs.gov to receive an electronic copy of the document.
