

When a party knowingly and willfully pays remuneration to induce or reward referrals of items or services payable by a Federal health care program, the Federal anti-kickback statute is violated. By its terms, the statute ascribes liability to parties on both sides of an impermissible kickback transaction. Practitioner arrangements with Telemedicine Companies may also lead to criminal, civil, or administrative liability under other Federal laws including, for example, OIG's exclusion authority related to kickbacks, the Civil Monetary Penalties Law provision for kickbacks, the criminal health care fraud statute, and the False Claims Act. Practitioners may be personally liable for these types of arrangements, including for submitting or causing the submission of claims if they are involved in ordering or prescribing medically unnecessary items or services.

III. Recent Enforcement Experience

In recent years, OIG and the Department of Justice (DOJ) have investigated numerous criminal, civil, and administrative fraud cases involving kickbacks from Telemedicine Companies to Practitioners who inappropriately ordered or prescribed items or services reimbursable by Federal health care programs in exchange for remuneration. In those cases, Practitioners, Telemedicine Companies, and other participants in schemes have been held civilly, criminally, and administratively liable for: (1) paying or receiving a payment in violation of the Federal anti-kickback statute, (2) causing a submission of claims in violation of the False Claims Act, and/or (3) other Federal criminal laws.

While the facts and circumstances of each case differed, often they involved at least one Practitioner ordering or prescribing items or services for purported patients they never examined or meaningfully assessed to determine the medical necessity of items or services ordered or prescribed. In addition, Telemedicine Companies commonly paid Practitioners a fee that correlated with the volume of federally reimbursable items or services ordered or prescribed by the Practitioners, which was intended to and did incentivize a Practitioner to order medically unnecessary items or services. These types of volume-based fees not only implicate and potentially violate the Federal anti-kickback statute, but they also may corrupt medical decision-making, drive inappropriate utilization, and result in patient harm.

IV. Suspect Characteristics

Based on OIG's and DOJ's enforcement experience, we have developed the below list of suspect characteristics related to Practitioner arrangements with Telemedicine Companies which, taken together or separately, could suggest an arrangement that presents a heightened risk of fraud and abuse. This list is illustrative, not exhaustive, and the presence or absence of any one of these factors is not determinative of whether a particular arrangement with a Telemedicine Company would be grounds for legal sanctions.

- The purported patients for whom the Practitioner orders or prescribes items or services were identified or recruited by the Telemedicine Company, telemarketing company, sales agent, recruiter, call center, health fair, and/or through internet, television, or social media advertising for free or low out-of-pocket cost items or services.
 - The Practitioner does not have sufficient contact with or information from the purported patient to meaningfully assess the medical necessity of the items or services ordered or prescribed.
 - The Telemedicine Company compensates the Practitioner based on the volume of items or services ordered or prescribed, which may be characterized to the Practitioner as compensation based on the number of purported medical records that the Practitioner reviewed.
 - The Telemedicine Company only furnishes items and services to Federal health care program beneficiaries and does not accept insurance from any other payor.
 - The Telemedicine Company claims to only furnish items and services to individuals who are not Federal health care program beneficiaries but may in fact bill Federal health care programs.
 - The Telemedicine Company only furnishes one product or a single class of products (e.g., durable medical equipment, genetic testing, diabetic supplies, or various prescription creams), potentially restricting a Practitioner's treating options to a predetermined course of treatment.
 - The Telemedicine Company does not expect Practitioners (or another Practitioner) to follow up with purported patients nor does it provide Practitioners with the information required to follow up with purported patients (e.g., the Telemedicine Company does not require Practitioners to discuss genetic testing results with each purported patient).
- Practitioners who enter into arrangements with Telemedicine

Companies in which one or more of these suspect characteristics are present should exercise care and may face criminal, civil, or administrative liability depending on the facts and circumstances. This Special Fraud Alert is not intended to discourage legitimate telehealth arrangements. For example, OIG is aware that many Practitioners have appropriately used telehealth services during the current public health emergency to provide medically necessary care to their patients. However, OIG encourages Practitioners to use heightened scrutiny, exercise caution, and consider the above list of suspect criteria prior to entering into arrangements with Telemedicine Companies. This Special Fraud Alert does not alter any person's obligations under any applicable statutes or regulations, including those governing the billing or submission of Federal health care program claims.

For more information on telehealth-related issues, please visit our website, which includes additional materials relating to the provision of telehealth. If you have information about Practitioners, Telemedicine Companies, or other individuals or entities engaging in any of the activities described above, please contact the OIG Hotline at <https://oig.hhs.gov/fraud/report-fraud> or by phone at 1-800-447-8477 (1-800-HHS-TIPS).
