Commission finds necessary and appropriate to adjust or meet any condition unfavorable to shipping the foreign trade of the United States.'' 46 U.S.C. 42101(a) and 42106(1), (4) and (5); see also 46 CFR 550.601. The Commission may also request the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security to refuse entry or clearance to vessels, collect fees imposed by the Commission, or detain a vessel about to depart from a U.S. port. 46 U.S.C. 42107(1) and (2).

As described, the Commission has broad jurisdiction under 46 U.S.C. 42101 to investigate and take action to remediate conditions resulting from the laws or regulations of foreign governments that are unfavorable to shipping in U.S. foreign trade, whether in a particular trade or on a particular route or in commerce generally. See 46 U.S.C. 42101(a). Regulatory action is appropriate ''when the Commission finds . . . that a foreign government has promulgated and enforced or intends to enforce laws, decrees, regulations or the like, or has engaged in or intends to engage in practices which presently have or prospectively could create conditions unfavorable to shipping in the foreign trade of the United States.'' 46 CFR 550.102. Laws or policies enforced by a foreign government that refuse entry to vessels documented under the laws of the United States are inconsistent with the Commission's statutory mission to ensure access to the complex and interdependent system for the common carriage of goods by water in foreign commerce, and the goal of maintaining a healthy U.S. merchant marine.

The Commission now requests further comments on whether Spain is creating general or special conditions unfavorable to shipping in foreign trade, and if so, what remedial actions the Commission should consider. Information about the following would assist in advancing the Commission's investigation and helping it determine whether remedial action is appropriate: (1) any additional confirmed reports of Spain, including any governmental component and/or any private sector entity, directly or indirectly refusing port access or docking privileges to any vessels, including U.S. flag vessels, transporting cargo on routes bound for or coming from Israel; (2) reasons stated by Spain, including any governmental component and/or any private sector entity, for refusing port access or docking privileges; (3) whether the refusal(s) were conditional or absolute (i.e., whether measures or steps that could be taken to be granted port access were described); (4) whether Spain, including any governmental component and/or any private sector entity, offered any alternatives or options; and (5) factual information about the impact any such refusals or denials had on vessel routes, schedules, transfer of cargo to other vessels or ports other than designated destinations, or on maritime commerce generally.

Information or perspectives about the following would be helpful in the event the Commission determines that remedial action is warranted: (1) information concerning vessels connected to Spain, whether through flagging or some other link, such as incorporation or headquarters location, calling at U.S. ports, including tankers and other types of commercial vessels; (2) information concerning types or amounts of cargo that could be appropriately limited in trade between the United States and Spain; and (3) suggestions for any other action the Commission might find necessary to adjust or meet the unfavorable shipping conditions Spain appears to have created through its port access restrictions.

By the Commission.

Jennifer Everling,

Assistant Secretary.

In addition, the PRA also requires federal agencies to provide a 60-day notice in the Federal Register concerning each proposed collection of information, including each new proposed collection, each proposed extension of existing collection of information, and each reinstatement of previously approved information collection before submitting the collection to the OMB for approval. To comply with this requirement, we are publishing this notice of a proposed data collection as described below.

The OMB is particularly interested in comments that will help:
