SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The BLM is seeking public comment on potential updates to BLM Manual 6320—Considering Lands with Wilderness Characteristics in the BLM Land Use Planning Process. The manual provides policy and guidance for evaluating and considering lands with wilderness characteristics during land use planning under section 202 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA) and other applicable laws. Consistent with FLPMA and other applicable authorities, the BLM considers management of public lands identified as having wilderness characteristics in land use plans, amendments, or revisions. Lands with wilderness characteristics share similar conditions as designated wilderness or existing wilderness study areas; however, their management is derived from land use planning or project-level management decisions. The BLM is interested in receiving information and recommendations regarding whether updates, clarifications, or other revisions to existing Manual 6320 may be appropriate.
