

Revisions to This Information Collection

ATF is revising information collection OMB 1140–0097 to reflect a decrease in the overall annual public burden. The number of respondents to this ICR have decreased from the last renewal in 2023, from 680 respondents to 670, because fewer persons applied for explosives licenses during the intervening three years. This decrease also resulted in a corresponding decrease in the hourly burden, from 340 hours to 335. In addition, because the forms have become entirely electronic, the amount of time required to complete this information collection has decreased from 0.5 to 0.3 hours, further decreasing the hourly burden for this ICR to 201 hours. As part of this ICR renewal, ATF is also revising the form number from ATF Form 5000.30 to ATF Form 5400.30 to align with changes to ATF's numbering structure, and is revising the title of the form and the ICR for plain writing purposes, from "Supplemental Information on Water Quality Considerations—Under 33 U.S.C. 1341(a)" to "Supplemental Information on Water Quality Considerations." In addition, ATF is making minor plain writing edits to text on the form, removing obsolete references to submitting multiple copies and to including a form or serial number, and is adding clarifying parentheticals to the applicant and signature boxes for entity applicants and responsible persons.

II. Discussion

Draft NUREG–1220, Revision 2, proposes updated structured guidance for the NRC staff to review, approve, and inspect SAT programs for nuclear power plant personnel across large light-water reactors (LWRs), advanced reactors (including non-LWRs and stationary microreactors), and small modular LWRs. The guidance applies to initial training program submissions under part 50 of title 10 of the Code of Federal Regulations (10 CFR), “Domestic Licensing of Production and Utilization Facilities,” (construction permits and operating licenses) and 10 CFR part 52, “Licenses, Certifications, and Approvals for Nuclear Power Plants,” (combined licenses) and is also relevant to applicants for design certifications or standard design approvals that submit topical reports. It supplements NUREG-0800, “Standard Review Plan for the Review of Safety Analysis Reports for Nuclear Power Plants: LWR Edition,” Chapter 13, “Conduct of Operations,” and supports compliance with 10 CFR 50.120 and 10 CFR part 55, “Operators’ Licenses,” (including 10 CFR 55.31 and definitions in 10 CFR 55.4). For existing LWR programs accredited by the Institute of Nuclear Power Operations, inspections rely on NRC Inspection Procedure 41500, “Training and Qualification Effectiveness” and focus on performance outcomes rather than imposing additional requirements; consistent with prior Commission statements, the guidance does not seek to add requirements or to mandate additional job and task analyses.

Draft NUREG-1220, Revision 2, clarifies the NRC staff’s review and inspection approach using both comprehensive programmatic reviews and focused “vertical slice” reviews that trace a topic end-to-end through the SAT phases—analysis, design, development, implementation, and evaluation—to verify systematic linkage and program validity. It underscores that SAT is performance-based and that each phase must produce traceable, quality-assured products (e.g., actionable task lists; condition–action–standard learning objectives; leveled, defensible evaluation instruments; detailed lesson and simulator guides; secure, independent exams; remediation protocols). Recognizing the scalability and flexibility needed for advanced and microreactors, the guidance anticipates organizational structures that differ from conventional LWR programs. In such cases, applicants are expected to describe how regulatory role functions are fulfilled and to justify systematic training aligned to job and task analyses, including human factors engineering and cognitive task analysis to capture supervisory control and automation-related knowledge, skills, and abilities. The evaluation phase is emphasized as continuous, drawing on formative, summative, and confirmative methods—as well as operating experience, corrective action program inputs, inspection results, design/procedure changes, and regulatory/industry developments—to identify issues and implement corrective actions commensurate with significance. Overall, the draft aims to ensure clarity, relevance, and accuracy in training programs, so they reliably produce qualified personnel and demonstrable performance consistent with safety and regulatory requirements, while providing predictable, transparent expectations for applicants and licensees.
