MARSSIM benefited from extensive internal, public, and technical peer review and comment. Before the publication of the draft for public comment, the four Federal agencies performed an extensive internal review that identified several key areas of needed improvement. After addressing internal comments, the four federal agencies announced a sixty-day open public comment period² and an additional forty-five day open public comment period.³ The document simultaneously received formal technical peer review under the auspices of the EPA Science Advisory Board (SAB). The four federal agencies completed additional changes to address public and technical peer review comments, resulting in MARSSIM, Revision 2.⁴

Abstract: Subpart K within 40 CFR part 262 provides a flexible and protective set of regulations that address the specific nature of hazardous waste generation and accumulation in laboratories owned by colleges and universities, including teaching hospitals and non-profit research institutes that are either owned by or formally affiliated with a college or university. In addition, eligible academic entities have the discretion to determine the most appropriate and effective method of compliance with these requirements—by allowing them the choice of either managing their hazardous wastes in accordance with the alternative regulations as set forth in subpart K, or remaining subject to the existing generator regulations.
