Human remains representing, at least, three individuals have been identified. The 57 associated funerary objects are 24 ceramic vessels, 18 bone implements, two charmstones, one lithic tool, one bead, seven projectile points, two flakes and lithic fragments, one mano, and one fragment of turquoise. The human remains and cultural items were removed by Earl and Mildred Wilson, private collectors that focused primarily on areas of New Mexico and Arizona. The Wilsons noted their collecting locations on hand-drawn maps and the human remains and associated funerary objects were removed from two locations along NM State Road 117, near the northeast boundary of the El Malpais National Monument, in 1960 and 1961. The human remains and associated funerary objects were brought to CSUF in 1974 for curation and the university purchased the collection in 1981.

Abstract of Information Available

Human remains representing, at least, 45 individuals have been identified. The 83 associated funerary objects are rings, bracelets, and faunal remains.

In May of 1897, Curator George A. Dorsey removed four individuals and five associated funerary objects from the Blood 148 Reserve in Alberta, Canada. In May of 1894, Indian Agent, Robert N. Wilson removed 23 individuals and 78 associated funerary objects from the Blood 148 Reserve, and five individuals from the Piikani 147 Reserve in Alberta, Canada. The Field Museum accessioned all of these 32 individuals in October of 1897. At some time prior to August 10, 1905, Wilson removed 13 individuals from the Piikani 147 Reserve. The Museum accessioned these individuals on August 10, 1905. Museum records and consultation indicate that these 45 individuals are culturally affiliated with the Blackfeet Tribe of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation of Montana based on a relationship of shared group identity. While they were removed from locations in Alberta, the human remains bear a relationship to a Tribe indigenous to the United States. There is no known presence of hazardous substances.

Abstract of Information Available

Human remains representing, at least, one individual have been identified. The human remains were removed from the Las Estufas site in Maricopa County, AZ, during a 1979 archaeological undertaking to mitigate the impacts of disturbance of sub-surface cultural remains during construction for a housing development project. Archaeological evidence suggests that the Las Estufas site was occupied from the Hohokam Colonial through the Sedentary Periods (approximately A.D. 550 to 1100). The two associated funerary objects are one lot of ceramics and one lot of pollen samples.

There is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the Native American human remains and associated funerary objects described in this notice and the Ak-Chin Indian Community; Gila River Indian Community of the Gila River Indian Reservation, Arizona; the Salt
