SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Under the PRA (44 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.), Federal agencies must obtain approval from the OMB for each collection of information that they conduct or sponsor. ''Collection of information'' is defined in 44 U.S.C. 3502(3) and 5 CFR 1320.3(c) to include agency requests or requirements that members of the public submit reports, keep records, or provide information to a third party. Section 3506(c)(2)(A) of title 44 generally requires Federal agencies to provide a 60-day notice in the Federal Register concerning each proposed collection of information, including each proposed extension of an existing collection of information, before submitting the collection to OMB for approval. To comply with this requirement, the OCC is publishing notice of the revision of this collection.

Title: ''Company-Run Annual Stress Test Reporting Template and Documentation for Covered Institutions with Total Consolidated Assets of $250 Billion or More under the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act.''

OMB Control No.: 1557–0319.

Type of Review: Revision.

Affected Public: Businesses or other for-profit.

Description: Section 165(i)(2) of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act [1] (Dodd-Frank Act) requires certain financial companies, including national banks and Federal savings associations, to conduct periodic stress tests [2] and requires the primary financial regulatory agency [3] of those financial companies to issue regulations implementing the stress test requirements.[4] Section 165(i)(2) requires these financial companies to submit to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (Board) and to their primary financial regulatory agency a report at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the primary financial regulatory agency may require.[5]

On October 9, 2012, the OCC published in the Federal Register a final rule implementing the section 165(i)(2) annual stress test requirement.[6] This rule describes the reports and information collections required to meet the reporting requirements under section 165(i)(2). These information collections will be treated as confidential (to the extent permitted by law).[7]

In 2012, the OCC first implemented the reporting templates referenced in the final rule,[8] and the OCC is now proposing revisions to these templates. The OCC uses the data collected to assess the reasonableness of the stress test results of national banks and Federal savings associations covered by the OCC stress testing rule (covered institutions) and to provide forward-looking information to the OCC regarding a covered institution's capital adequacy. The OCC also may use the results of the stress tests to determine whether additional analytical techniques and exercises could be appropriate to identify, measure, and monitor risks at the covered institution. The stress test results are expected to support ongoing improvement in a covered institution's stress testing practices with respect to its internal assessments of capital adequacy and overall capital planning.

The OCC recognizes that covered institutions generally have parent companies required to submit reports using the Board's reporting form FR Y–14A.[9] The OCC also recognizes the Board has made modifications to the FR Y–14A and, to the extent practical, the OCC is keeping its reporting requirements consistent with the Board's FR Y–14A in order to minimize burden on covered institutions.[10] The Board also made several changes to its stress testing regulations, and the OCC expects to separately propose conforming changes to its own stress testing regulation.[11]

The proposed reporting form changes would reflect changes made by the Board, including to the timeline of the annual stress testing cycle. These changes include updating the date for submitting stress test results to April 30.

The proposed reporting forms include one difference from the Board's requirements with respect to the global market shock of the severely adverse scenario. The Board's amended rules provide for two global market shock scenarios, with the Board using the maximum loss of the combined trading and counterparty results across both GMS scenarios to determine a firm's stress test results. The Board's amended rules use the largest combined trading and counterparty losses across the two scenarios in each firm's stress test results and to inform each firm's stress capital buffer requirement. The proposed reporting forms would not require covered institutions to estimate the impact of both global market shock scenarios in their submissions to the OCC. However, the proposed reporting forms would require covered institutions to determine the impact of both scenarios in order to submit reporting form entries based on the global market shock scenario that results in the greatest loss to the covered institution's common equity tier 1 capital, which may not be the same global market shock scenario that results in the greatest loss to the common equity tier 1 capital of the parent company. The OCC invites comment on alternative requirements, such as whether covered institutions should be required to submit results based only on the scenario that is most impactful for their parent holding company or whether covered institutions should be required to submit results based on both scenarios.

The OCC's proposed changes include other limited updates, and the OCC reporting forms will substantially resemble the forms used by the OCC last year. The OCC's changes generally parallel the Board's changes. The proposed reporting forms would add certain line items to reflect changes in other regulatory reports (including the Call Report). The proposed reporting forms would retire certain line items as they are no longer applicable to the current process. The Board's reporting form changes include new line items related to pre-provision net revenue. These new line items provide additional break-out and detail of bank loss and revenue sharing agreements, and the impact to credit card revenue. The OCC proposed reporting forms would treat these items as optional for submission to the OCC. The revisions also include clarifying changes to the section describing supporting documentation (Appendix A) that should be submitted, including documentation of key methodologies, processes, and assumptions.

If the Board proposes additional changes to the FR Y–14A reporting forms after the publication of this notice, the OCC may make corresponding changes to the OCC reporting forms to minimize inconsistencies and reduce burden. The OCC's revised reporting forms and instructions are available on the OCC's website at https://www.occ.treas.gov/publications-and-resources/forms/dodd-frank-act-stress-test/index-dodd-frank-act-stress-test.html.
